

How To Participate in #JHMChat

About the Chat

Each month, our team selects a recently published Journal of Hospital Medicine (JHM) article and prepares thought-provoking questions for an hour-long conversation among hospital medicine professionals across Twitter.

Led by a moderator, with the help of guest expert(s), #JHMChat fosters engagement and creates a sense of community for all participants. No matter how long you have been a member of the healthcare community or been active on Twitter, you are welcome to join!

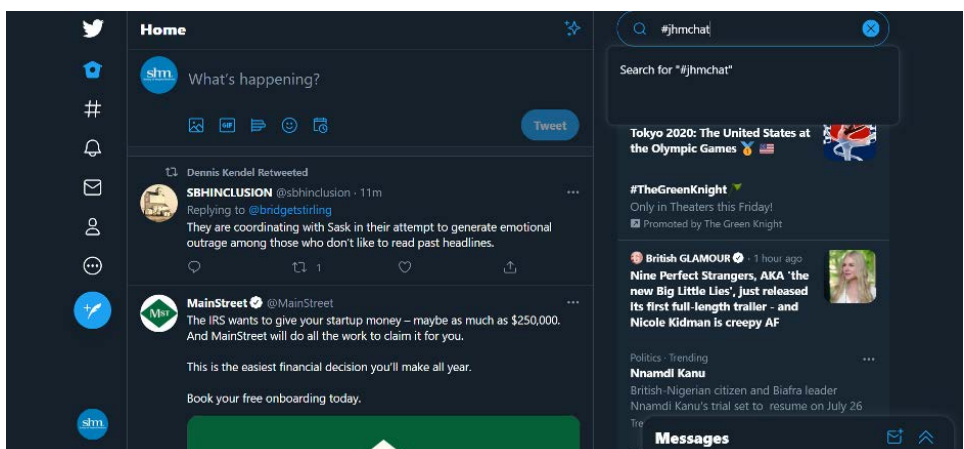

Chats typically take place monthly at 9 p.m. ET on Monday evenings, with a short summer break from June through August.

Join the Chat

- 1 Log on to twitter.com or open the Twitter app.

- 2 Type "#JHMChat" into the search bar and hit enter.

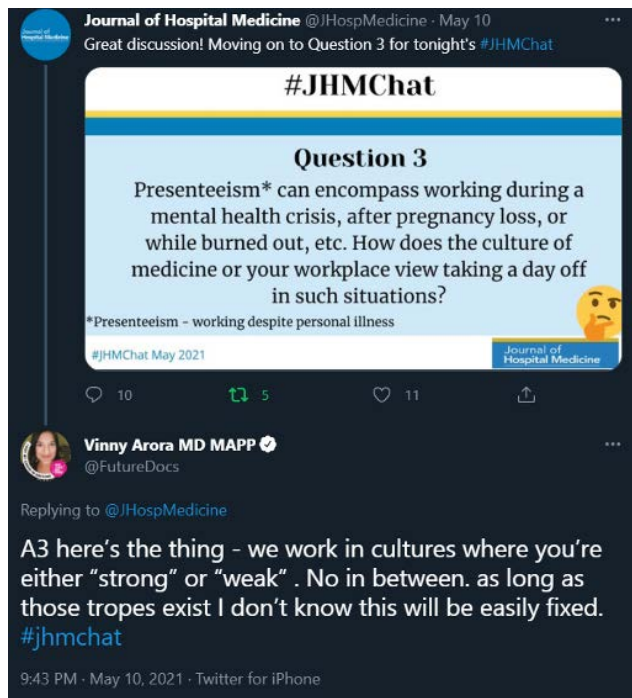

3 At the top of your screen, click "Latest" to see new tweets as they are published

4 At 9 p.m. ET, the chat will begin. The #JHMChat moderator will provide an introduction and prompts.

5 Respond to the prompts using the #JHMChat hashtag and by starting your tweet with the letter "A" and the number of the question you are answering. In this example, it is A3.

6 Feel free to engage with other participants as responses begin to populate. (Make sure to include the #JHMChat hashtag on all tweets to be part of the conversation.) While the conversation naturally progresses with each question, feel free to answer any previous questions or tweets as you please.

7 Miss the chat? No worries! A transcript of the chat is posted the day after the chat at hospitalmedicine.org/jhmchat.

Have questions? Email communications@hospitalmedicine.org.

How To Participate in #JHMChat

Journal of Hospital Medicine

